EVENT THEME

DISLOCATION: THE DEATH OF THE GOLDILOCKS ECONOMY AND THE RISE OF DISCONTENT

Political cohesion and stability can no longer be relied upon, with everything from trade deals to central bank swap lines being renegotiated or cancelled altogether.

Liquidity in the financial system, which has stemmed from easing monetary policy, is already contracting. In a world where derivatives traverse borders, connecting financial systems like never before, a liquidity crisis presents an enormous tail risk amid high levels of leverage.

The era of co-ordinated global monetary policy since the GFC, especially among the three largest players (ECB, the Fed, and BoJ), will be looked back upon with nostalgia by the current gaggle of central bankers who influence the halls of power. Policy will increasingly be driven by greater sensitivity to nationalist, rather than international, concerns.

If circumstances are going to be profoundly different in the next decade, how should asset owners invest and will active management once again be paramount?
